Martha Minow is the 100th Anniversary University Professor at Harvard University where she has taught at Harvard Law School since 2002, and where she served as dean from 2002 - 2008. Her courses include advanced constitutional law; fairness and privacy; family law; international criminal justice; law and education; and law, justice and design. An expert in human rights, constitutional law, and advocacy for members of racial and religious minorities and for women, children, and persons with disabilities, she also writes and teaches about media policy, privatization, technology and ethics, military justice, and ethnic and religious conflict.

She is the author of many scholarly articles and books, including "Saving the News" (June 2009); "When Should Law Forgive?" (2009); "In Brown's Wake: Legacies of America's Constitutional Landmark" (2009); "Between Vengeance and Forgiveness: Facing History After Genocide and Mass Violence" (2008); and "Making All the Difference: Inclusion, Exclusion, and American Law" (2006).
